Can Do
The spirit of youth-led social innovation
YouthActionNet® 2013
A program of the International Youth Foundation, YouthActionNet pursues a bold mission: to strengthen and scale up the impact of youth-led social ventures around the world. Through its local and global fellowship programs, YouthActionNet provides training, funding, advocacy, and networking opportunities to social entrepreneurs, ages 18 to 29, who have pioneered solutions to urgent global challenges. Joining us are universities, foundations, corporations, government agencies, and individuals—all united in their support of young leaders whose innovations are changing the world—one community at a time.

INTERNATIONAL YOUTH FOUNDATION

The International Youth Foundation (IYF) invests in the extraordinary potential of young people. Founded in 1990, IYF builds and maintains a worldwide community of businesses, governments, and civil society organizations committed to empowering youth to be healthy, productive, and engaged citizens. IYF programs are catalysts of change that help young people obtain a quality education, gain employability skills, make healthy choices, and improve their communities.

SYLVAN/LAUREATE FOUNDATION

This publication was produced with support from the Sylvan/Laureate Foundation, the company foundation of Laureate Education, Inc. Since 1997, the Sylvan/Laureate Foundation has provided more than $13 million in grants to 100 non-profit organizations. Its mission is to support best practices in training and education worldwide.

A member of the YouthActionNet community, the Sylvan/Laureate Foundation sponsors the Laureate Global Fellows and is co-sponsor of YouthActionNet programs at Laureate International Universities—the world’s largest network of private universities, comprised of more than 70 institutions of higher education in 30 countries and 780,000 students. YouthActionNet programs are currently operating at Universidade Anhembi Morumbi (Brazil), Universidade Potiguar (Brazil), Universidad Andrés Bello (Chile), Universidad Peruana de Ciencias Aplicadas (Peru), Universidad Latina (Costa Rica), Universidad Tecnológica Centroamericana (Honduras), Universidad del Valle de México, Universidad Tecnológica de México, Universidad Europea (Spain), and Istanbul Bilgi University (Turkey).

A ‘Can Do’ Vision

Creating one of the world’s largest networks of young social entrepreneurs

2013 YouthActionNet Fellow ANNA SOWA on location in Egypt. Through Chouette Films, Anna tells environmental and human interest stories that too often go untold.
“It’s an honor and a privilege to be part of YouthActionNet. Beyond learning, I’ve gained great friends and a partner that is always striving to add value for its fellows.”

LINA USECHE JARAMILLO ’10
Executive Director, Aliança Empreendedor | Brazil
Every day, we are inspired and humbled by the can do attitude of the more than 880 YouthActionNet Fellows around the globe. It is their infectious sense of possibility and innovative problem solving that sets these young leaders apart.

One of them is Lina Useche Jaramillo (left), Co-founder and CEO of Aliança Empreendedora. Since 2005, the Alliance has supported more than 15,000 micro-entrepreneurs in low-income communities across Brazil with the support of companies, government agencies, and NGOs. Lina is passionate, smart, and persistent—typical traits of the young founders/CEOs of our unique leadership program which works in more than 70 countries. We knew when this rising star was selected as a Fellow in 2010 that she was destined for a lifelong career of leading social change.

Fast forward to 2013. YouthActionNet is now reaching hundreds more emerging leaders like Lina through a rapidly expanding network of 16 national/regional institutes, each supporting change-makers in their 20s. With 24 institutes and 1,500 Fellows expected to become part of our efforts by 2015, our vision of creating a truly global, scalable model is now a reality.

This year, we welcomed five new institutes—three of them in Africa. Thanks to the generosity of our regional partners—The MasterCard Foundation and U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID)—we launched two leadership institutes targeting youth across the Francophone and Anglophone regions. A third institute was added in Nigeria through LEAP Africa, a long-time IYF partner. A fourth institute is being created through Universidad Tecnológica de México (UNITEC), one of ten Laureate International Universities to join this expanding network. And we welcomed yet a fifth institute in Kyrgyzstan, as part of our ongoing partnership with USAID in that country.

At the heart of our efforts are the extraordinary young leaders who we have the privilege to support. On pages 4 to 7, you will meet the 2013 Laureate Global Fellows—20 exceptional social entrepreneurs in 18 countries—who are creatively tackling issues from air pollution to workers’ rights, and from the harassment of women to the destruction of marine ecosystems.

Complementing their stories are profiles of program alumni. Their remarkable achievements underscore the long-term value of this unique program and the education, training, and networking opportunities it provides to Fellows throughout their social change journeys. This year we are initiating a continuing education effort for all our alumni to provide them with ongoing support through mentoring, use of program curricula, advanced capacity building for their enterprises, and other means that allow them to be resources to each other, mining the best of this peer-to-peer experience beyond their fellowship year.

We are proud to support these courageous, compassionate youth who, leading by their example, serve as a powerful force for good in today’s world.

Laureate Global Fellows are young social entrepreneurs who have pioneered cutting-edge solutions to urgent societal challenges. Each year, 20 leaders, ages 18 to 29, are selected for this distinction through a partnership between the Sylvan/Laureate Foundation and IYF through its YouthActionNet program. Fellows benefit from advanced leadership training, coaching, advocacy, and networking opportunities. Together, they demonstrate Laureate’s commitment to developing enduring programs that change the lives of people in their home countries and around the world.

Kat-Katha | New Delhi, India

Through Kat-Katha, Gitanjali provides women sex workers with caring support and the chance to pursue a basic education and develop job-related skills in tailoring, weaving, and craft making. Kat-Katha also offers classes to children living in brothels. kat-katha.org

CAROLINA GARCÍA, 29
Bellelli Educación | San José, Costa Rica

Passionate about early childhood education, Carolina founded Bellelli Educación in the belief that children need a culture of play to develop their full potential. Among its activities, the organization hosts ‘Pop-Up Playgrounds’ in public spaces or schools that allow children to express their creativity and explore their curiosity through the use of cardboard boxes, fabrics, tape, and other materials. bellellieducacion.com

TAREK ZIAD HUSSEIN, 21
Team Success | Brabrand, Denmark

“As soon as the young people saw success within the educational system, it spread to all other aspects of their lives.”

Tarek co-founded Team Success to provide academic tutoring, life skills, and career planning support to immigrant youth. Team Success now operates nine programs in several cities throughout Denmark, with three government ministries now helping to expand the initiative’s reach. team-succes.dk

ECONOMIC EMPOWERMENT

ADAM CAMENZULI, 25
KARIBU Solar Power | Ontario, Canada

ADAM co-founded KARIBU Solar Power, a social enterprise, to bring much-needed light to rural villagers in Tanzania, especially students studying after dark. Its goal: to produce solar lamps that improve health and safety, avoiding the toxic emissions produced by kerosene lamps. The solar lamps, which can charge mobile phones, are designed so that low-income families can make payments in small increments. karibusolar.com

KELLEN RIBAS, 29
Cicla Brasil (Brazil Cycle) | São Paulo, Brazil

KELLEN co-founded Cicla Brasil to strengthen communication between waste picker associations and businesses in an effort to bring this marginalized group into the formal economy. Among its services, Cicla Brasil offers technical advice to the National Movement of Waste Pickers, helps develop business plans for waste picker’s organizations, and develops tools to guide private investment. ciclabrasil.com.br

CIVIC ENGAGEMENT

BASANT MOTAWI, 24
Imprint Movement | Cairo, Egypt

“I’ve experienced street harassment since I was 14. The only thing that’s changed is my reaction to it.”

BASANT and a group of fellow students at Ain Shams University launched the Imprint Movement to combat sexual harassment in Egyptian society. The initiative recruits and trains volunteers who collaborate with police to patrol high-risk neighborhoods in Cairo at prime times to prevent assaults. Volunteers also visit public places—like the subway—to pass out educational information.

ANDI TAUFIN GARUDA PUTRA, 26
Amartha Microfinance | Bogor, Indonesia

ANDI founded Amartha Microfinance to provide affordable financial services to low-income individuals living in remote rural areas of Indonesia. In a country where more than 100 million people live on less than $2 a day, Andi’s organization has provided average loans of US$100 to over 3,000 women, ages 18 to 65, in over 50 villages. amartha.co.id

Positive Innovation for the Next Generation | Gaborone, Botswana

KATY co-founded Positive Innovation for the Next Generation (PING) to develop and deploy mobile health and education tools with local government and private sector partners, while mentoring youth in IT skills. PING uses technology to increase efficiencies and improve health and education systems in emerging markets through interventions that are sustainably designed and national in scope. pingsite.org

CHARLES BATTE, 26
Family Health Centre | Kampala, Uganda

An aspiring heart surgeon, CHARLES developed the Family Health Centre to ensure patients at clinics in rural Uganda receive the same level of care as patients in urban areas. Profits from an urban health center, currently in operation, will eventually support secondary clinics in rural villages. Doctors will work on a rotational basis between the urban and rural centers and each will have a registered number of families in his/her care.

LEE CROCKFORD, 29
Spur Projects | Brisbane, Australia

With suicide now the leading cause of death among males ages 14 to 44 in Australia, LEE co-founded the Spur Projects to break down barriers that inhibit men from seeking help. Initiatives include ‘Soften the Fck Up,’ which challenges the idea of masculinity in Australian culture and encourages men to actively seek support; and ‘Make Sound,’ which offers creative workshops for men living in remote areas. spurprojects.com.au

NAOMI CHEPCHUMBA, 24
Street Level Initiative Kenya | Eldoret, Kenya

Of the 3 million Kenyans infected with HIV, over 67 percent are youth, ages 18 to 24. To prevent the spread of the disease among the younger generation, NAOMI founded the Street Level Initiative Kenya. Carried out largely in nightclubs, the initiative provides DJs and musicians with peer education training so that they can pass along reproductive health information—and condoms—to club patrons.

Chouette Films | London, United Kingdom

As a film producer, anna understands the role that storytelling can play in inspiring audiences to take action on critical social and environmental issues. She also recognizes that nonprofits, academic institutions, and the public sector often lack the visual evidence and tools needed to effectively promote their work. Through Chouette Films, anna produces high-quality, low-cost films featuring important work being done to improve lives in the developing world, for example, in the areas of agriculture, education, and human rights.

kumari middleton, 28
Mayibuye | Hawthorn, Australia

Kumari is CEO of Mayibuye, a youth-led organization that runs after-school programs, camps, and more—in Australia, South Africa, and Cambodia—to engage youth through the performing arts. Participants use art, music, drama, and dance to convey important messages about issues like HIV/AIDS, substance abuse, bullying, and racism. Mayibuye goes beyond empowering youth to become positive role models; it also incorporates life skills workshops, volunteerism, community service, and global connectivity into its programs.

Where are YouthActionNet Alumni now?

Many continue to re-imagine and ‘scale up’ their social ventures. Others have founded bold new enterprises. Still others serve as high-level advocates for their causes. Profiled here are four of our alumni, with many more Fellows capturing the local and global spotlight.

A H M A D  A L H E N D A W I  ’08

UN Secretary General’s Envoy on Youth | Jordan

In 2008, A H M A D was selected as a YouthActionNet Fellow for his efforts to actively engage Jordanian youth in the development of their country. Today, the 29-year-old serves as the first-ever United Nations Secretary General’s Envoy on Youth. Says Ahmad, “The UN wants to work with and for young people. My mission now is to facilitate that.” Ahmad held various positions in international, regional, and national organizations dealing with youth that prepared him for his new role. Among his strategies for engaging youth in making their voices heard is leveraging the power of technology. In the first of a series of Google+ Hangouts, Ahmad recently encouraged young people around the world to get more involved in the UN body’s work. un.org/youthenvoy
KHALIDA BROHI ’08
Sughar | Pakistan

Empowering women and championing their rights—locally and globally

KHALIDA was 17 when she lost a friend in her village to an ‘honor killing.’ Committed to raising awareness of the issue, she launched the Youth and Gender Development Program in 2007, and soon became one of YouthActionNet’s youngest Fellows. For Khalida, success was a mixed blessing, with tribal leaders eventually forcing her to abandon the group’s advocacy efforts and flee to Karachi. Now 24, she founded and leads Sughar, a social enterprise that empowers tribal women to use their embroidery talents to generate income. A passionate advocate for women’s rights, Khalida has addressed numerous global forums, receiving recognition from the likes of CNN correspondent Christiane Amanpour and Oprah Winfrey. sugharwomen.blogspot.com
As a sophomore in college, Jennifer founded Unite For Sight (UFS) in her dorm room. At the time of her YouthActionNet Fellowship four years later, UFS was just beginning to extend its eye health care model to Africa. Today, UFS is a leader in providing cost-effective care to the world’s poorest people. By investing human and financial resources in eye clinics in developing countries, UFS has provided eye care to more than 1.6 million people living in extreme poverty, including more than 65,000 sight-restoring surgeries. Each year, UFS’ Global Health & Innovation Conference convenes more than 2,000 participants and is now the world’s largest global health and social entrepreneurship conference. The recipient of numerous awards, Jennifer’s work has been featured extensively in the media, including in the New York Times and CNN International. uniteforsight.org
FREDRICK OUKO ALUCHELI ’09
Action Network for the Disabled | Kenya

Advancing the rights of youth with disabilities

FREDRICK knows well the challenges youth with disabilities face. After applying for a job at a major IT company in Nairobi early in his career, he was invited for an interview based on his resumé. “While everyone else’s interview lasted 15 minutes mine took only 3. I knew my fate was sealed as a result of my disability,” he recalls. Today, as Founder and Executive Director of the Action Network for the Disabled (ANDY), Fredrick works to combat discrimination and injustice against youth with disabilities, while seeking to mainstream them into all aspects of daily life. A key focus is economically empowering youth through entrepreneurship support, skills training, and job placement assistance. ANDY also plays a strong advocacy role through public education projects, legal clinics, lobbying for new policies, and training youth with disabilities to assume roles in various sectors of the economy. andy.or.ke

By 2015, the YouthActionNet global network will span 24 national/regional institutes serving 1,500 young social entrepreneurs.

But numbers tell only part of the story. Our work is predicated on the notion that the whole is far greater than the sum of its parts. YouthActionNet institutes are now prime focal points for youth social entrepreneurship in their countries/regions. In the years to come, their collective efforts will contribute to a far more fertile investment and policy environment benefiting the work of a whole generation of change-makers.

Below are three more ways we are working to deepen and expand our reach.

ENGAGING UNIVERSITY STUDENTS
To help bring ‘learning to life’ on university campuses around the world, YouthActionNet links students and classrooms to its Fellows and their social ventures. Through sharing their real-life experiences in addressing community challenges, Fellows bridge the gap between theory and practice, while inspiring their university peers—poised on the brink of their careers—to consider how they can contribute to positive change. Learning flows both ways with students sharing their knowledge of marketing, communications, business planning, evaluation, and more with Fellows. Such win-win relationships are made all the more possible through our partnership with Laureate International Universities in eight countries—and growing.

EXPANDING CONTINUING EDUCATION
With 700+ of our alumni advancing their social change careers, we work to not only connect Fellows but provide them with continuing education opportunities. Learning takes many forms—whether through webinars, videos, mentoring, or the sharing of valuable resources. Capitalizing on the power of the Internet, our ‘learning live’ webinar series examines trends and explores issues ranging from going to scale to crowdfunding. A related video series enables Fellows to learn about successful innovations being employed by their peers in different parts of the world. In the months to come, we will be expanding our continuing education offerings for the benefit of alumni who face new challenges—and opportunities—in their social change journeys.

BUILDING A GLOBAL COMMUNITY
Our work would not be possible without the support of a rapidly expanding community of foundations, businesses, government agencies, academic institutions, and individuals who share our passion for investing in today’s young leaders. In 2013, more than 425 government, business, and civic sector partners around the globe joined with us in pursuit of our mission. As YouthActionNet writes its next chapter, we welcome even greater participation in bringing the social change visions of so many creative and courageous youth to life.
“Through YouthActionNet, I was able to re-formulate our vision, mission, and objectives to meet with my desire to lead an organization guided by principles of accountability, integrity, effectiveness, and inclusiveness.”
